

France: Short-time working due to Ukraine war

March 2022

Alongside France's economic and social resilience plan, the government focuses on short-time working in companies that may see their activities slowed down or brought to a halt due to the Russian invasion of Ukraine. Workers employed by Russian, Belarusian or Ukrainian companies established in France, are eligible.

In the case of seconded employees, companies must prioritise their repatriation before resorting to short-time working. They may only have access to these schemes if repatriation is impossible due to the geopolitical situation.

To be eligible for the short-time working, the decision to shut down operations must not have been voluntary.

Edited by industriAll Europe